Boy sees no charges in Bonneau death

Lee Bonneau should have begun Grade 2 on Tuesday, but instead it was a day when information about the six-year-old's grisly death, allegedly at the hands of another child, was released by police.

At a news conference in Regina, Staff Sgt. Larry Brost, acting officer in charge of an RCMP major-crimes unit, confirmed that if the suspect had not been under the age of 12 — the age needed to face the legal system under the federal Youth Criminal Justice Act — he would have been charged with murder in the tragedy at a Saskatchewan First Nation.

"There is no other person at this point in time in the investigation that could be responsible, other than this child," Brost told reporters at RCMP divisional headquarters.

The boy — whose age has not been made public due to privacy legislation — is in the custody of the Ministry of Social Services and is being held at an out-of-home facility equipped with 24-hour supervision.

He is deemed "in need of protection," according to Social Services, while medical and other professionals determine the kind of treatment and supervision he will require.

Lee died on Aug. 21 at southeast Saskatchewan's Kahkewistahaw First Nation from head trauma caused by a weapon — not a gun or knife, police confirmed, but a weapon "of opportunity."

Lee had last been seen walking with the other boy after he went missing from outside a community centre where his caregiver was playing bingo. Lee, whose funeral was held on Friday, was a ward of a foster home just outside the reserve near Broadview.

The two boys did not know each other. No one in the community appears to have seen the beating. Lee's body was found at 10:20 p.m. a short distance from the community centre.

The suspect's family has received services from Yorkton Tribal Council Child and Family Services at the reserve.

Social Services Minister June Draude is asking the province's child advocate, Bob Pringle, to immediately look into the case.

"We lost not just one child, but we lost two," Draude said.

"We lost individuals that could have been a part of our society right now."

Traffic restrictions in school zones back in effect

Tale of two cities. Saskatoon and Regina have different approaches to dealing with speeds in school zones

Though Saskatoon drivers have been given one more thing to think about on the roads this fall, commuters in Regina didn't get a summer break.

Angela Gardiner, manager of the transportation branch for the City of Saskatoon, confirms that school-zone traffic laws are in effect from September to June and apply between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. on weekdays.

"There are a number of different ways of enacting school zones," Gardiner said on Tuesday.

"Some municipalities have them year-round, some have them reduced to 40 kilometres per hour — and in Saskatoon, it's 30 km/h."

In Regina, the year-round speed limit in school zones is 40 km/h.

The reason for Saskatoon's system, said Gardiner, is that city council wants to focus on the times when students are most at risk.

"Before and after school and during the school day is really when they wanted to draw the attention of motorists," she explained.

At the 101 school zones across Saskatoon, the speed limit is 30 km/h — and this year, for the first time, U-turns in the zones are illegal. The fine for an illegal U-turn in Saskatoon is $50, while for speeding it's the same as on other roads.

Pre-school teacher Jennifer Trottier says the local school-zone restrictions aren't good enough.

"They should be in place all year round, because children do go to use the playgrounds at the school during the summertime — so drivers should be aware," said Trottier.

However, Scott Lewis, an employee with the Saskatoon Health Region, said it makes sense to give drivers a little more room.

"The schools are out, so why not just let people drive?" he asked. JACOB MORGAN/METRO

City workforce needs more diversity: Report

Mubarka Butt, manager of employment and total compensation with the city.

MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO

The City of Saskatoon's workforce is the most diverse it's ever been, but officials say it's falling short of goals set by the Saskatchewan Human Rights Commission.

According to a city employment equity report submitted to the executive committee on Tuesday, Saskatoon is behind in three of its four targeted diversity groups.

In 2012, 39.1 per cent of the workforce was women — about 7.9 per cent lower than the targeted goal.

Of those, 7.6 per cent were aboriginal employees — 5.5 per cent lower than the desired number. As well, 3.8 per cent were employees with disabilities, 5.9 per cent lower than the city's goal.

However, within the diversity group of visible minorities, which comprises 6.9 per cent of the municipal workforce, the city has surpassed its goal by 0.3 per cent.

Mubarka Butt, city manager of employment and total compensation, said the administration is trying to attract and retain desired employees.

"Communication is probably the main thing," Butt said at city hall.

"It's key (to have communication) back to the employer from the employees to gain a better understanding of what the employees want and what they look for in an employer."

"We have been recognized as one of Canada's best diversity employers for two years in a row ... and while that's a commendable accomplishment, at the same time we recognize there's room for improvement."

Officials say the city has introduced a number of initiatives this year to try to make improvements. These include a diversity and inclusion strategy, diversity workshops and resource groups through which employees can discuss, with fellow staff members, the challenges and opportunities of working for the city.

Saskatchewan companies get federal boost

The federal government has given a group of companies across Western Canada more than $1 million to help them expand their footprints in international markets.

Michelle Rempel, minister of state for western economic diversification, was in Saskatoon on Tuesday to announce that the Saskatchewan Trade and Export Partnership (STEP), alongside its partners in Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia, will receive about $1.1 million to help it participate in trade shows and export missions around the world. MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO

Job satisfaction

Absenteeism of Saskatoon city staff at five-year low

City hall says employee absenteeism is the lowest it's been in five years and as a result has saved the municipality more than $900,000. The number of days lost due to occupational injury has decreased by more than 3,800 over five years, a city report states.

Administrators say they're attributing the drop to job satisfaction, more consistent management of absenteeism and better occupational health and safety practices.

Kim Matheson, occupational health and safety manager, said the trend makes a statement about the city as an employer. METRO

The hunt goes on

Grizzlies in crosshairs. B.C. government refuses to recognize First Nations tribal ban on bear hunting

vancouver@metronews.ca

Trophy hunting of grizzly bears on B.C.'s central coast continues while First Nations struggle to enforce a year-old tribal law barring hunters from killing the animals for sport, Metro has learned.

A source who asked to remain anonymous provided Metro with photographic evidence of a hunter showing off the severed head and paws of a grizzly bear after a spring hunting trip last May in the Kwatna River estuary between Bella Bella and Bella Coola.

"They are photos that were taken by one of my field technicians this spring," said Jessie Housty, an elected Heiltsuk tribal councillor and member of the Coastal First Nations Bear Working Group, a program whose staff have been patrolling and erecting signs in areas of high hunting activity.

"Our technician was invited onto the hunter's boat and had a conversation with him. The man in the photo identified himself ... as being Clayton Stoner."

A Minnesota Wild spokesman confirmed Tuesday afternoon that the man in the photo was Stoner, a 28-year-old defenceman originally from Port McNeill, B.C.

"I grew up hunting and fishing in British Columbia and continue to enjoy spending time with my family outdoors," Stoner said in an emailed statement.

"I applied for and received a grizzly-bear hunting licence through a British Columbia limited-entry lottery last winter and shot a grizzly bear with my licence while hunting with my father, uncle and a friend in May. I love to hunt and fish and will continue to do so."

The B.C. ministry of forests, lands and natural resource operations estimates some 300 grizzlies are harvested in the province every year.

Stoner is not the first NHL player to attract criticism. Last year, Canucks winger David Booth tweeted a photo of a black bear he had killed with a bow on a hunting trip in Alberta, saying: "Just killed a Chara sized bruin! 7ft black bear - 21in skull."

The tweet proved controversial because Booth had used a technique called bear baiting, which is allowed in Alberta but illegal in B.C.

With the fall bear-hunting season opening across B.C. — the activity is allowed and regulated by the provincial government — Housty said it remains difficult to enforce the tribal hunting ban, since provincial officials don't recognize its authority.

"Ultimately what we'd like to see is other governments respecting the ban that we've put in place," Housty said.

She argues hunting for sport is also a threat to sustainable economic opportunities, including eco-tourism, that First Nations have been exploring.

"Bears are worth far more alive than they are dead."

The B.C. minister of forests, lands and natural resource operations was not immediately available for comment. A ministry spokesman said there are at least 15,000 grizzlies in B.C.

Officials have released 3,786 limited authorizations allowing hunters to shoot and kill bears during this year's spring and fall seasons.

The ministry estimates some 300 grizzlies are harvested in the province every year.

Canada no longer ship-shape after navy plays bumper cars

A weekend collision with a naval supply ship could hasten the demise of the Canadian navy's only command-and-control destroyer in the Pacific, a naval expert warns.

The accident involving HMCS Algonquin and HMCS Protecteur will "quite seriously compromise" the country's naval readiness on the West Coast, especially in light of continuing repairs to the frigate HMCS Winnipeg, rammed by an American fishing trawler in a separate accident last spring.

"This is a politically awkward time to be absent from the Pacific," said Dan Middlemiss of Dalhousie University in Halifax, who has written extensively about the navy.

Naval engineers are conducting damage assessments on both the destroyer and supply ship, which have returned to their home port of Esquimalt, B.C., and have not said how long each vessel will be laid up.

Commodore Bob Auchterlonie, commander of the Pacific fleet, said the damage to Protecteur is "cosmetic" and the ship hopefully will be back at sea next week.

A more extensive damage survey will be carried out on Algonquin over the next few weeks.

Middlemiss says both the Harper government and the navy must decide whether the benefits of returning the 40-year-old destroyer to service outweigh the cost of retiring the ship, which has the capacity to co-ordinate other Canadian warships when they operate as a task force.

Retirement would be a serious consideration, especially if repairs stretch out more than a year, Middlemiss said.

Auchterlonie wouldn't speculate on what might happen.

Documents obtained under access-to-information legislation show the navy anticipates Algonquin and her sister ships HMCS Iroquois and HMCS Athabaskan will retire over the next few years, possibly without replacements in the water.

A series of slides show the navy has been anticipating a "capability gap" with its command destroyers but was doing everything to move replacements forward.

SIU probe. Elderly woman falls, fractures hip after being Tasered by police Ontario's police watchdog is investigating an incident in which they say an 80-year-old woman fell and suffered a fractured hip after she was struck by police with a Taser.

Special Investigations Unit spokeswoman Monica Hudon said three Peel Region officers approached the woman at about 3:30 a.m. last Wednesday as she was walking along a road in Mississauga.

Hudon said officers spoke with the woman until "at some point" an officer fired his Taser.

Hudon said the elderly woman fell to the ground and was rushed to Credit Valley Hospital for treatment.

The incident occurred one day after the province announced it would permit all front-line police officers to carry stun guns.

The use of force by police in Ontario has come under scrutiny after Sammy Yatim, 18, was shot multiple times and Tasered by police during a confrontation on an empty streetcar.

Videos of the incident prompted hundreds of people to take to the streets.

Another high-profile case that brought the police use of Tasers under public scrutiny was the 2007 death of a Polish immigrant at Vancouver's airport.

Robert Dziekanski died after being stunned with a Taser by RCMP. A public inquiry found that the officers were not justified in using the Taser.

Top U.S. Republican supports Syrian strike

Congress returns next week. President's push to gain congressional approval gains steam as Speaker John Boehner signals his support President Barack Obama gained ground Tuesday with his drive for congressional backing of a military strike against Syria, winning critical support from the top Republican in Washington. Key Senate Democrats and Republicans agreed to back legislation ruling out the use of U.S. ground troops in any military response to a suspected chemical weapons attack.

The Republican speaker of the House of Representatives, John Boehner, said taking action is something "the United States as a country needs to do."

Boehner emerged from a meeting at the White House and said the United States has "enemies around the world that need to understand that we're not going to tolerate this type of behaviour."

Obama on Saturday unexpectedly stepped back from ordering a military strike under his own authority and announced Saturday he would seek congressional approval.

The president urged Congress to hold a prompt vote once it returns from holiday next week.

He also tried to assure the public that involvement in Syria will be a "limited, proportional step."

"This is not Iraq, and this is not Afghanistan," Obama said.

He met with top lawmakers hours before he leaves on a three-day trip to Europe, with a visit to Sweden and a G20 summit in Russia.

Lawmakers in both the Republican and Democratic parties called for changes in the president's requested legislation, insisting it be rewritten to restrict the type and duration of any military action.

Officials said the emerging Senate measure would receive a vote Wednesday in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Approval is likely.

In the Senate, the compromise was the work of Sens. Bob Menendez, the Democratic chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Bob Corker, the senior Republican on the panel. Their committee held a lengthy hearing during the day on Obama's request for congressional legislation in support of the military reprisal he wants.

The proposed measure would set a time limit of 60 days for any military action and says the president could extend that for 30 days more unless Congress has a vote of disapproval.

The measure also bars the use of U.S. ground troops for "combat operations."

Syria prepares to fight back

As the Obama administration tries to prod Congress into backing armed action against Syria, the regime in Damascus is hiding military hardware and shifting troops out of bases into civilian areas.

Politically, President Bashar Assad has gone on the offensive, warning in a rare interview with Western media that any military action against Syria could spark a regional war.

If the U.S. undertakes missile strikes, Assad's reaction could have a major effect on the trajectory of Syria's civil war. Neighbouring countries could get dragged into a wider conflict, or it could be back to business as usual for a crisis that has claimed the lives of more than 100,000 people over two and a half years.

The main Western-backed opposition group says that during the buildup last week to what seemed like an imminent U.S. attack, the army moved troops as well as rocket launchers, artillery and other heavy weapons into residential neighbourhoods in cities nationwide.

Report. More than 8,000 women killed in India last year over dowry disputes

One woman dies every hour in India because of dowry-related crimes, indicating that the country's economic boom has made demands for dowries even more persistent, women's rights activists said Tuesday.

The National Crime Records Bureau says 8,233 women were killed across India last year because of disputes over dowry payments given by the bride's family to the groom or his family at the time of marriage.

The conviction rate in dowry-related crimes remained a low 32 per cent, according to statistics the bureau published last week.

Indian law prohibits the giving or receiving of a dowry, but the centuries-old social custom persists.

Dowry demands often continue for years after the wedding. Each year, thousands of young Indian women are doused with gasoline and burned to death because the groom or his family felt the Women's rights activists and police said that loopholes in dowry prevention laws, delays in prosecution and low conviction rates have led to a steady rise in dowry-related crimes.

Dowry demands have become even more insistent and expensive following India's economic boom, said Ranjana Kumari, a women's rights activist. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Seems that when little green robots eat candy bars, they opt for a Kit Kat. Tech pundits have speculated for months that the next Android operating system would be called Key Lime Pie — in keeping with Google's affinity for naming new versions after desserts — but on Tuesday the firm revealed it has chosen a brand-name candy for the first time. The Android 4.4 Kit Kat system is expected to launch in October, and in turn, the robot mascot is pictured tucking into a chocolate bar on the new Kit Kat label, shown above. Potash. Uralkali slams Belarus' arrest of CEO

Russia's largest potash producer, Uralkali, on Tuesday criticized Belarus' prosecution of its CEO as an attempt to keep the company from competing in the local market.

Uralkali pulled out of a trading venture with its partner in Belarus in July. Because most of the venture's employees reportedly went to work for Uralkali, Belarus was left with virtually no qualified staff to manage its potash exports.

That raised fears that the company was trying to gain control over the country's resources and start a pricing war.

Belarus responded by arresting Uralkali CEO Vladislav Baumgartner last week on suspicion of "abusing his powers," and issuing an arrest warrant for Suleyman Kerimov, a Russian billionaire who is the largest shareholder with a 22 per cent stake. Analysts have described the arrests and allegations as an act of retaliation.

Uralkali said in a statement Tuesday that Belarusian authorities have launched a "politically motivated persecution" against the company.

Wireless market

After Verizon fuss, cell prices could creep up again

A decision by U.S. giant Verizon to no longer try to enter Canada's wireless market may mean Canadians could soon end up paying more on their cellphone bills, say several analysts.

The prospect of Verizon's entry had produced more options for consumers as the country's big three wireless carriers offered new data sharing plans, previously unavailable for smartphones and tablets, telecom analyst Iain Grant said Tuesday.

"If nothing else, even the spectre of Verizon coming here was enough to change pricing in the Canadian market," Grant said. "Without Verizon, will prices creep up? I think, sadly, the answer is probably yes." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Halifax. Mall that ran sexist ads donates $5K

Halifax's Mic Mac Mall has made a $5,000 donation to a group that supports young women exploring careers in science and technology.

The donation fulfils a promise made in response to a social media backlash and complaints that a back-to-school advertising campaign was sexist. The ads featured cartoon women with slogans equating shopping with scientific endeavour. The mall pulled the ads in late August and promised to make a donation to an organization that empowers young women.

On Tuesday, the mall said it will give the funds to Techsploration, which provides opportunities for female students in Grades 9 through 12 to explore careers in science, trades and technology. METRO IN HALIFAX

WHAT DID YOU DO ON THE WEEKEND?

Weekend warriors are a dime a dozen.

They're out running marathons, hanging off cliff faces, riding their bicycles up steep switchbacks, or playing hockey at three in the morning because that's the only ice time available.

They whack various little round balls with various sticks and rackets.

They run, jump, throw, slide and stretch. Unlike real athletes, who vie for world records or record paydays, they do all of this for next to zero recognition — a cheap medal, a certificate, a plastic water bottle, a trophy from Trophies R Us.

They get hurt. Sometimes they die. But unless they die, they don't quit.

Then there's Diana Nyad.

What she did this weekend goes into the Weekend Warrior Hall of Fame. She accomplished what she had already

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

failed to do four times: Become the first person to swim the 177 kilometres from Cuba to the Florida Keys, without a shark cage.

If that last detail doesn't get your attention, how about she spent 53 hours in the water, swallowed so much seawater that she vomited early and often, was stung by jellyfish, but like the Energizer Bunny in a wet-suit, she just kept going until she hit the beach in Florida.

Did I mention that she is 64 years old?

Why did she do it?

How about she "wants to send a message of peace, love, friendship and happiness ... between the people of the United States and Cuba."

Other people might send an email.

Diana Nyad has had this "Xtreme Dream" since 1978 when she tried and failed the first time.

At the time, she was already a long-distance swimmer who set the world record for swimming around the Island of Manhattan in under eight hours.

Then, life got in the way, but she never forgot her unfinished business and after a 30-year layoff, she tried again in 2011. And again. And again. And again in 2012.

Frankly, I thought she was done the last time. But never count a weekend warrior out. They can't help themselves.

A cynic (that's usually me) could say she's a motivational speaker and author (her books have titles like The Boss of Me) and needs fresh material to remain in demand on the lecture circuit — after all she charges up to $40K a pop.

But really? What would you rather do: Face sharks, jellyfish, choking brine, storms, waves, nausea and fatigue? Or find another topic?

Or you could do what most 64-year-olds do. Think about retiring.

But I suspect Diana Nyad is not done yet.

Not as long as there's still another weekend.

@EastVanPrint: Encryption and closed networking

@almajwilson70: find them real jobs obviously they have nothing constructive to do

Vin Diesel returns to the Pitch Black series in his role as Richard B. Riddick. CONTRIBUTED

Going from the sexiest ugly man to Richard B. Riddick

Vin Diesel. Few know that the Fast and Furious and Pitch Black star has been acting since age seven and has a long list of accomplishments

scene@metronews.ca

Vin Diesel has been acting since age seven and played many characters on screen, but he is best known by two alter egos.

We'll have to wait until next year to see him behind the wheel as Dominic Toretto in the new Fast and Furious movie, but this weekend he returns to theatres as Richard B. Riddick, anti-hero of the Pitch Black series of films and video games.

In Riddick, his fourth outing as the mercenary-turned-enforcer, he has been double-crossed and left for dead.

His battles with predatory aliens has honed his skills, his thirst for revenge and his desire to return to his home planet of Furya.

Diesel loves playing Riddick. "I know it sounds corny but I feel like I learn about myself when I play that character," he says.

But he's also created some other memorable characters.

Critics and audiences first took notice of Diesel as Private Caparzo in Saving Private Ryan. He says winning the role was "like one of those Hollywood fairy tales that you never believed."

Director Steven Spielberg saw Multi-Facial, an über low budget short film directed by and starring Diesel.

The ET director was so taken with the young actor's performance that he had a role specially written for him. The result was an effective performance that mixed physicality with poignancy.

Diesel lent his distinctive gravelly voice to the title character in the animated film The Iron Giant.

Directed by Brad Bird, the story of a lonely boy who discovers a 50-foot, metal-eating robot who fell from space, failed at the box office but has a 97 per cent Rotten Tomatoes rating.

His searing portrayal of streetwise stockbroker Chris Varick in the 2000 stockbroker drama Boiler Room garnered him considerable critical praise.

Roger Ebert wrote, "Diesel is interesting. Something will come of him," and New York Times critic A.O. Scott said the actor, "may be the sexiest ugly man in movies since Anthony Quinn."

Knockaround Guys is a coming-of-age story with a gangland twist.

The four sons (Vin Diesel, Seth Green, Barry Pepper, and Andrew Davoli) of Brooklyn mobsters band together to reclaim a quarter of a million dollars lost in a small town run by a crooked sheriff (Tom Noonan).

Diesel oozes charisma in a so-so film, tossing off tough guy lines like, "That's about the only thing you can count on in this life, there's nobody that wouldn't hurt you ... if it helped them," with ease.

More on Riddick

Being the only girl in the room on Riddick

In Riddick, Katee Sackhoff co-stars alongside Vin Diesel as Dahl, the only female member of a team of mercenaries — but also one of its toughest.

Riddick is very funny, surprisingly.

My best friend is terrified of scary movies. She's going to the premiere and she was like, "How scared am I going to be?" And I was like, "Sweetie, it's not scary."

Do you worry about doing what you're already known for when looking for parts?

I think people spend too much time trying to understand this business when you can't understand it. I don't think there's any real right way or wrong way to do this. Truthfully, I feel blessed that people want me to do it at all, and if that's science fiction and action, I'd rather do that than so many other genres. So I'm good.

It doesn't mean that I can't do and haven't done things outside of it; it's just where fans want to see me right now. You give them what they want, you know?

Old-school comedy goes faster and funnier

There was a time when an audience would hear how a show was "filmed in front of a live studio audience" rather than the rumbling ha-ha-has of a laugh track. City's new show Package Deal is a return to the old-school ways of comedy.

"It was my first time doing anything live," admitted Julia Votch, who plays the woman who comes between three close brothers in this original series.

"I haven't done theatre ... so I was a bit nervous, but the first time hearing them laugh at you and what you are doing, it felt so great and it heightened everyone's performance."

Executive produced by Andrew Orenstein, and also starring Randal Edwards, Jay Malone and Harland Williams, the series was to premiere in the spring, and then summer, before being pushed into the fall by City.

It will now air Mondays starting Sept. 30.

"For the first time in my career we were actually bumped for hockey," joked Orenstein, who worked on

Malcolm in the Middle and 3rd Rock from the Sun. "I think it is a nice vote of confidence for the show that, you know, they looked at our show, and they went and looked at the other shows that they are buying, and thought, 'Well, heck, it would fit in nicely.'"

Orenstein says that in the last 10 or 15 years, the reality of situational comedy shows has changed.

"The world is quicker," he said. "You have to be quicker and faster and funnier."

James Deen as Mr. Grey? Not enough alcohol in the world

While the casting announcements are official for 50 Shades of Grey — with Dakota Johnson and Pacific Rim star Charlie Hunnam taking the much-debated lead roles — apparently not everyone is in agreement behind the scenes of the hot literary adaptation.

After the news was announced, author Bret Easton Ellis took to Twitter to rain on the parade and share some information.

“Talked to (author) E.L. James at a party over the summer. Her first choice for Christian was Rob Pattinson,” he posted.

“When E.L. James asked me who I thought should be Christian I said, ‘(Porn star) James Deen, of course,’ and then she shoved me. We were both very wasted.”

Hayden Panettiere is apparently having a hard time following her own advice, at least where body art is concerned.

Recent paparazzi photos of the 24-year-old actress seem to reveal that she's in the process of having a tattoo removed from her back that reads, “live without regrets” in Italian. The tattoo runs down the left side of her back and includes a spelling error, something tabloids were quick to point out when she first had the work done four years ago.

American Idol rounds out its panel with latest addition

After months of speculation, it was announced that handsome Southern crooner Harry Connick Jr. and former American Idol judge Jennifer Lopez are officially joining American Idol 13.

The two join Keith Urban on the judge's panel; stalwart Randy Jackson will be back as an “in-house” mentor.

And, what would Idol be without Ryan Seacrest? The personality, of course, will be back as host.

“I have always been a huge fan of American Idol and really enjoyed my time as a mentor on the show,” said Connick in a press release.

“And I am honoured that they've asked me to be a judge this season. As an entertainer, I am truly excited to bring my perspective to American Idol and to help emerging performers find their way.”

For her take on the announcement, Lopez simply tweeted, “#IDOL-2014TheRemix.”

Hopefully the addition of Connick and Lopez will help this new season's ratings. This past season was American Idol's worst rated since the show began airing in 2002.

Island time. Beyond the beautiful beaches are great restaurants and exciting activities

JIM BYERS

Rum bars filled with colourful locals, glorious beaches, waterfalls you can climb and romantic river rafts. Yep, Jamaica has a lot to offer.

Of course, there are the swanky resorts and infamous spots such as Hedonism, where just about anything goes, including a lot of bathing suits. And don't forget the jerk shacks that waft heavenly spices out over the island and the reggae music.

Sleeping

Negril has awesome sunsets and an endless beach flanked by resorts such as Beaches, Sandals and the aforementioned Hedonism. Further north and east are the impeccable grounds of Half Moon, a RockResort, equipped with a fun and not too tricked-up golf course, a sweeping beach and a who's who list of attendees, including Queen Elizabeth and Paul Simon. My personal favourite resort for a taste of local culture is Jakes at Treasure Beach, a spot on the south side of the island with pseudo-Moroccan design and glorious detached villas in bright ochre and pale blue.

Dining

Half Moon features the romantic Sugar Mill restaurant, with a gorgeous patio lit up by overhead lights hanging from gnarly trees. Try the snapper in a coconut-saffron sauce or jerk chicken spring rolls. A favourite for casual jerk chicken is Scotchie's near the Montego Bay Airport, where you can fill your belly for less than $10. In the Montego Bay Freeport zone is the fabulous House Boat restaurant, reached by a three-second ferry/raft. Gaze out on the bay and the lights in the hills and dine on spicy shrimp in a scotch bonnet beurre blanc sauce or a

Doing

At Half Moon you can take a horseback ride and swim with the animals, who love nothing more on a hot day than submersing themselves in the cool ocean water. Dunn's River Falls is famous as a playground where you can clamber up large rocks and dunk yourself in the cool water running down from the mountains. Prefer to let someone else do the work? Try a romantic rafting trip on the peaceful Martha Brae River near Falmouth, where a local will guide you along on a wide bamboo raft under a jungle canopy.

Drinking

If you must, you can down Jell-O shots or any number of sickly sweet things at Jimmy Buffett Margaritaville on the Hip Strip in Montego Bay, which is jammed to the rafters with cruise ship day-trippers and has a cool waterslide that drops you a couple stories into the bay. You don't want to miss Rick's Café, south of Negril. The water is the most beautiful shade of aquamarine imaginable, and local kids will do handstands and crazy dives off huge cliffs for a couple of bucks. You can try a belly-flop of your own from several spots, too. Take a boat ride from the south shore to the ramshackle Pelican Bar, which sits in a few feet of warm water a half mile or so off the coast and looks to be mostly made up of driftwood, with a thatched roof. Very memorable.

The sunsets in Negril are some of the best you'll find anywhere.

Queen Conch fritter. Jakes at Treasure Beach has a marvelous kitchen. Next door on the beach is Jack Spratts, which serves a fabulous jerk sausage pizza.

Accused murderer requests delay in Florida lawsuit

Former NFL star tight end Aaron Hernandez is seeking to delay proceedings in a Florida lawsuit until a murder charge against him in Massachusetts is resolved.

Hernandez's lawyers filed the postponement request Tuesday in federal court. They say it would be legally unfair to Hernandez to permit the lawsuit to continue while he is defending himself in the shooting death of 27-year-old Odin Lloyd. Hernandez has pleaded not guilty to Lloyd's slaying and weapons charges.

In the Florida lawsuit, 30-year-old Alexander Bradley claims Hernandez shot him in the face after they argued at a strip club in February. Bradley seeks at least $100,000 in damages.

U.S. Open. Top-ranked men's player shuts out Granollers over final two sets to advance to quarter-finals

Showing the kind of beginning-to-end focus he'll need to win the U.S. Open, top-seeded Novak Djokovic strung together 13 straight games Tuesday to close out a 6-3, 6-0, 6-0 thrashing of Marcel Granollers and advance to his 18th straight Grand Slam quarter-final.

"Today, second and third set have been some of the best tennis that I've played on Arthur Ashe in my career," said Djokovic, who has made the final at Flushing Meadows the last three years and won it in 2011.

"It all comes at a great time for me. It was something I was wishing to be more aggressive as the tournament progresses and to be able to stay committed to play every point, to win every point, regardless of the score."

The match took 79 minutes against Granollers, who was on court for nearly three and a half hours two days before in a five-set win over Tim Smyczek.

Over the final two sets, Djokovic had embarrassingly large advantages in points (50-15) and winners (22-3), and he even won on 21 of 22 moves up to net, which isn't his normal style.

Djokovic has spent a total of five hours and 42 minutes on court without dropping a set. He has lost more than three games in any single set only once, against Benjamin Becker, who actually had a pair of set points in the first set of their second-round match, but lost them both. Esks' Hervey unleashes wrath on Rottier

The Stampeders sacked Edmonton quarterback Mike Reilly seven times on Monday in Calgary. JEFF MCINTOSH/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Edmonton Eskimos general manager Ed Hervey lit into his 1-8 football team Tuesday, and announced he has reached past his coaching staff to indefinitely bench underperforming offensive lineman Simeon Rottier.

Hervey told reporters he will no longer sit quietly by and watch star quarterback Mike Reilly get slammed, drilled and ragdolled after every throw.

"I'm done watching it," Hervey told a news conference at Commonwealth Stadium, a day after Reilly was sacked seven times in the team's 37-34 loss to the Calgary Stampeders.

"I've had enough."

Hervey said he met with head coach Kavis Reed after the game to discuss the changes, which include a new play-caller on offence, but when asked about Rottier said, "There was no room for negotiation on this one."

"Our football team is going to rest on the shoulders of how healthy and how much success Mike Reilly has. We have to protect him to give ourselves a chance."

"Our offensive line needs to improve and needs to improve fast," he said, adding that changes are coming to the line.

He said while linemen like Matt O'Donnell, Alexander Krausnick and Thaddeus Coleman have shown promise, he has lost patience with Rottier.

"The majority of my frustration has been with Simeon," he said.

"Clearly Simeon is not living up to expectations. It wouldn't bother me if he didn't play another down this year."

Self-driving cars and luxury SUVs very much in fashion this fall

Autopilot. New-age dealership tactics and forthcoming luxury SUVs are also in the mix this colourful season

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Car culture doesn't have spring and fall collections like we see in the fashion world. But that won't stop us from looking at some auto trends that have been percolating recently as we start the slide into autumn.

All three of the following trends and story lines added major plot developments this past week.

Luxury in every niche

Jaguar released a teaser image last week of its forthcoming C-X17 Concept, which will be unveiled at next week's auto show in Frankfurt. It's a tall-wagon or SUV thing! Jaguar was one of the few luxury brands left that hadn't gone over to the SUV dark side. Even Maserati is in the game now, with the Cherokee-based Kubang. But no sense beating your head against the wall; everyone else has already proven that there is money in those hills. Luxury brands used to exclusively make big sedans and big coupes. Now we have luxury contenders in every passenger car and crossover configuration, and in every size category, from compact to super size.

For the record, Jaguar said the C-X17 was created to debut Jaguar's new modular aluminum architecture, and will illustrate "the diversity of vehicles that could be produced using this architecture."

Self driving cars

Nissan announced last week it will be ready with commercially viable "Autonomous Drive" in multiple vehicles by the year 2020. Lots of automakers are working on self-driving cars, but Nissan is the first to give us an actual completion date. Of course, a "commercially viable" self-driving vehicle in 2020 might be a moot point, if jurisdictions around the world don't want to, or aren't ready with the right infrastructure to give the green light to this kind of ground-shaking change in the personal transportation world. Not long ago autonomous drive felt like a technology that was going to be in indefinite development; now it feels like the technology will not be denied.

Dealerships for millennials

We spoke recently about how the particular wants and needs of the millennium demographic are influencing vehicle design, but the impact of these 16 to 32 old buyers will also be driving change at the dealership. A recent and major study released last week by AutoTrader.com, revealed that millennials actually like kicking tires and talking to salespeople at a dealership even more than their baby boomer parents. But the kicker is that the experience goes down hill so much faster for them the second the salespeople get into any tactics, are less than forthright, and/or don't give them the time and space they need to make the right decision. Millennials strongly prefer a salesperson close to their own age that adopts a consultative approach, much like what they see in an Apple Store.

The Maserati Kubang is an example of new luxury SUVs. THE DETROIT AUTO SHOW

Final fashion tip

ion for a moment: Those of you still wearing white after Labour Day — more power to you. It's not a fashion hill I am prepared to die on, but for solidarity, I will continue with the white underwear.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

You think you know everything about a certain person but what happens over the next 24 hours will show you don't know the half of it. And you'll realize it's a great surprise.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Someone you are fond of may have done something of which you don't approve but there is no need to make an issue of it. If you love them, you should give them your full support.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Not everyone is as poised and graceful as you so if a friend or relative falls flat on their face today try not to laugh... too much. Of course, if they keep falling over there may be something seriously wrong.

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Whatever else you do today, don't get involved in other people's domestic situations. Even if you know you can help, your intervention won't be appreciated. Be smart and keep your distance.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Something has put you on edge and you don't like it one bit. The best thing to do is to put a name to the problem and then deal with it efficiently and ruthlessly.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

What you feel rather than what you think counts for more today. No matter how good a deal may look on paper if your instincts tell you there is something not quite right, you would be wise to turn it down.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Capricorns are not as detached as some people seem to think they are and what happens over the next couple of days will give you a chance to prove it. Be happy. Be warm.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You give off powerful vibrations that attract people to you and they will get more powerful still over the next 48 hours while the moon is new. Just make sure all these new friends don't cost you lots of money.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

A little bit of flattery will go a long way today and will go even further tomorrow when the moon is new in your opposite sign. Just don't say things you don't mean — that's just dishonest. SALLY BROMPTON
